

be black and with schools and different water fountains and all black and white people would be split apart from each other I would not have the friends I have today if it was not for Martin Luther King Jr. he helped by having protests so that black and white people would be treated the same. A word from drinking his self I love a beer and before he died he accepted it today there is not a lot of racism and people don't get treated

Summer Hazel Phelps

East Rock magnet School

5th Grade

Micole Raccio

Micole Raccio

Micole Raccio @ New-haven.142.ct.us

Martin Luther King Jr had a dream and that was to stop segregation.

In Spring of 1963 Martin Luther King Jr had a campaign of a mass protest in Birmingham, Alabama which in Dr. King's words it was the most segregated city in America. In 1965 Martin Luther King Jr got the right to vote, the Voting Rights Act outlawed the discriminatory.

Martin Luther King was fighting for civil rights before he died so that white and black people can do things together and so that white and black people's lives would not be split apart. Martin Luther King helped a lot with segregation if he did not stand up for them and other black people black and white people would be split apart from each other and they would